

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a violation of the public trust entrusted to them as broadcasters. These stations are not meant for their personal use.

This smacks of the same tactics used by Nazi Germany to spread propaganda and control the media for their own ends.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. It is more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
